George Reiman is pitching fine ball for the Dayton (Ohio) club.

The Millersburg ball team will play at Cynthiana Monday. Grimes and Hoard will be the battery for Millersburg, and Peterson and Carle for Cynthiana.

LANDLORD JAS. HUFF, of the Commercial Hotel, at Cynthiana, passed through Paris yesterday for Lexington, to help present Cynthiana's claims for the annual meet of the National Fox Hunters Association. The royal manner in which Cynthiana cared for the big bicycle meet entitles her claims and her invitation to careful consideration. The fox hunters are guaranteed the freedom of over 3,000 acres, besides a fine time. Here's hoping the Maiden City will get the meet.

THE Kentucky newspapers are this week teeming with nice things about the K. P. A.'s pleasing meeting at Middlesboro, and delightful excursions to Chattanooga, Knoxville and Nashville, and the many courtesies extended to the boys. They cannot say too many nice things of those who entertained them or of the L. & N., which always treats the K. P. A. so handsomely and generously.

News of The Turnpikes.

At noon Wednesday a masked man, armed with a pistol, robbed the cash drawer at a tollgate a mile from Nicholasville.

The Franklin Fiscal Court has bought the Lawrenceburg pike for $5,000 and the Frankfort and Shelbyville road for $8,500. There is now only one toll road in Franklin.

Unknown parties presumably turnpike raiders, burned four bridges on the Richmond and Big Hill pike and two on the Big Hill and Berea pike, in Madison county, Tuesday night. The object of the raid is believed to have been to force the turnpike companies to sell to Fiscal Court, now in session. There is no clew to the identity of the raiders except that they came from the Big Hill locality and numbered about 20 horsemen. The affair has created great excitement, and Directors are fearful that the gates will go up in smoke.

Woodford County Court Tuesday completed the purchase of all turnpike roads in the county, nearly 200 miles, at a cost of about $40,000. All toll gates were removed July 1 and the vexed turnpike problem which provoked raids last winter is now settled.

The Fiscal Court of Nicholas has offered Col. Baldwin $30,000 for that part of his pike lying in that county. Col. Baldwin declined the offer.

STEAMER ADEN

Wrecked on a Reef Near Socotra During a Gale.

A Boat Full of Sailors and Passengers Got Away From the Sinking Ship—The Vessel Has Not Been Heard From, and It Is Feared All Are Dead.

LONDON, June 30.—The missing steamer Aden has at last been heard from. She was wrecked June 9 on a reef near Socotra during a terrific gale. A number of her officers and crew were swept overboard and drowned. Eight passengers were also drowned. A boat full of sailors and passengers got away from the ship successfully on the morning of June 10 as the vessel was going to pieces. The gale, however, was unabated and the seas were still running mountain high. The boat has not been heard from, and it is feared all who sought safety in her perished.

Socotra is an island in the Indian ocean, off the east coast of Africa.

A later dispatch says nine passengers, three European and 33 native sailors of the crew were saved, while 25 passengers, 20 European and 33 native members of the crew, and all the ship's officers are missing, and are supposed to be drowned.

The Aden sailed from Yokohama April 28, and touched at Colombo, island of Ceylon, June 1.

BUSINESS BLOCK.

In South Scranton, Pa., Blown Up With Dynamite—Three Persons Seriously Injured.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 30.—A dynamite explosion early Tuesday morning in South Scranton blew up the business block of Leon Olchowski, a double dwelling block owned by him and a detached house owned by Michael O'Hara. The business block, a two-story building, was torn to pieces. Twenty other houses had all the windows blown out and plaster torn from the walls. The shock was felt all over the city.

The cause of the explosion is unknown, but Olchowski alleges that it was the work of enemies he made during political and church disputes in that section, he being one of the principals in troubles which led to a split in the Polish Catholic congregation. Olchowski was seriously injured in saving his wife, and his recovery is doubtful. Following the explosion the wrecked buildings took fire, but the firemen kept the flames from spreading. The other properties seriously damaged were the brick business block and dwelling of Charles Johnson, dwellings of William Grambe, Charles Kiefer, John Kline, Michael Joyce, Dr. J. J. Walsh, James Welsh, Adam Eflinger, Bridget Lavelle, Joseph Demins, Philip Klein, Carl Seherman and George Gardner, and B. Huses' blacksmith shop. In some of the houses the sleeping people were covered with falling plaster. The infant child of Michael Joyce was dangerously injured and a little son of John Klein almost suffocated. The total loss will reach $25,000. The ruins are being cleared to ascertain if there are any victims buried in them.

COLONIZATION SCHEME

Of Mr. Debs Has Not Been Abandoned as Has Been Reported.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 30.—The Debs colonization scheme has not been abandoned as has been reported. Victor L. Berger, editor of the Vorwaerts of this city, who attended the conference of the leaders of the social democracy at Chicago recently, says the whole matter has been misunderstood. He says it is the intention of the social democracy all over the country to go on organizing in the hope that eventually they will get into power and revolutionize the social system of the United States. Meanwhile, as fast as they get means, they intend to send unemployed people from the cities to a point in the west still to be selected, where they may have a chance to make a livelihood. The colonization scheme is only a side issue with the social democracy, but Mr. Berger says the press of the country have made it the main plan. Mr. Debs is in full accord with the plan outlined by Mr. Berger. The latter says there are three million unemployed in the country and he will consider his party lucky if it can raise money enough to transport only 10,000 to the west. There was never any intention of forming a vast army to invade the west in search of homes and a livelihood.

Sullivan Falls Out With His Trainer.

NEW YORK, June 30.—John L. Sullivan, who has been in training at Wm. Muldoon's, at White Plains, for the past week or two, in anticipation of a meeting with Fitzsimmons, has had a falling out with the veteran trainer, and as a consequence, he left his training quarters Tuesday night and came to New York city. He stated that he would go either to College Point or Oceanica, N. J., and there resume his training. He says that he has not yet selected a new trainer.

Death of "Old Hoss" Hoey.

NEW YORK, June 30.—William F. Hoey, "Old Hoss," prominent comedian, died Tuesday at the home of his mother-in-law in this city. Mr. Hoey was known throughout the United States through the character he had created in the farce, "A Parlor Match." Previous to his business and professional connection with Charles Evans, Hoey and Bryant constituted a musical comedy pair at vaudeville shows.

Anthrax Among Cattle.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., June 30.—A disease which resembles and is pronounced by local veterinarians to be anthrax has broken out among the cattle on the farm of George Mahan, near Sugar Grove, Pa., near this city. Five valuable cows and a bull have died from the disease within the past 48 hours.

A Wreck on the Oregon Short Line.

SALT LAKE, Utah, June 30.—A report has reached here that a passenger train on the Oregon Short Line road was wrecked near Glens Ferry, Idaho, and several people injured.

IDENTIFIED.

A Prospect That the East River Mystery May Be Solved—The Ripper's Victim Believed to Be Wm. Guldensuppe, of New York.

NEW YORK, July 1.—An identification that seems to promise a clearing up of the Ripper mystery is that the murdered man, two parts of whose body were found, was William Guldensuppe, an attendant at the Murray Hill baths, on Forty-second street. Several persons have so far identified the remains as his. A woman, who once loved this man, hated him. Two men were jealous of him, and had threatened him with revenge.

The positive identification is made by the superintendent of the baths and five attendants who had seen the man naked day after day for years, and knew every mark on him. He was further identified by Dr. J. S. Cosby. Dr. Cosby had lanced and treated a felon on the index finger of Guldensuppe's left hand. At the morgue Dr. Cosby instantly identified the cicatrix of the wound his lance had made. Guldensuppe had been a sailor.

On his breast was tattooed in India ink the bust figure of a woman. It covered a space as large as a man's hand.

The butcher who cut him up cut this out. Guldensuppe left the baths last Friday morning and disappeared. In all the four years of his employment there he had never missed a day's work. No word has been received from him. Guldensuppe had been living with Mrs. Augusta Nack, a midwife. She says she has not seen him since Friday morning and does not care where he is.

She found in his possession the card of another woman. It is said they quarreled.

There are two other men in the case whose jealousy of Guldensuppe was common gossip among the Murray Hill bath attendants. These men the police are looking for. Mrs. Nack is under surveillance. She had begun to dismantle her flat, telling other tenants she was going to Europe. The police Wednesday morning think they have Chapter One of the mystery.

The police late Wednesday afternoon released Herman Nack, saying that there was no evidence connecting him with the murder of Guldensuppe.

LINCOLN'S MOTHER.

A Movement to Provide a Fund for the Care of Her Grave.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 1.—Leading representatives of the Loyal Legion, Grand Army of the Republic, Woman's Relief Corps and other organizations, met in the executive chamber of the state house Wednesday for the purpose of considering plans for the erection of a monument over the grave of Nancy Hanks Lincoln, mother of Abraham Lincoln, and who is buried in Spencer county, this state, and also to provide a fund for keeping the proposed memorial and lot in repair. A national appeal for public subscriptions will be made by an executive committee appointed for that purpose.

To Cast a Big Steel Gun.

CLEVELAND, O., July 1.—Preparations are being made by the Otis Steel Co. to cast a big steel gun. Dr. R. J. Gatling, the inventor of the Gatling gun, is of the opinion that it is possible to make modern heavy ordnance of cast steel. In 1896, after years of effort, he obtained an appropriation of $40,000 from congress with which to make a test. The gun will be eight inches bore, 23 feet long and will weigh about 25 tons. The casting will be done by the Otis Co., and the gun will be bored by the Cleveland City Forge Co.

To Transfer National Headquarters.

CLEVELAND, O., July 1.—The headquarters of the national republican committee are to be located in Cleveland. They will be transferred from Washington to the famous Perry-Payne building in Cleveland, where Hanna conducted the national republican campaign. The Washington headquarters will be kept open, but will be in charge of an attaché of the national committee. Chairman Hanna and Secretary Dick expect to be at the Cleveland headquarters all summer.

Cornell Won.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 1.—The boat race between the Cornell, Pennsylvania and Columbia crews took place late Wednesday afternoon. At the start Pennsylvania was in the lead at the breakaway; Columbia second. At the first mile Cornell was in the lead by half a length; Columbia by a quarter length. Pennsylvania then forged ahead of Columbia. Cornell won by a length and a half. Columbia was second by a length. Time: 9 minutes and 20 seconds.

Murder on the Battleship Indiana.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Thomas J. Kenny, master-at-arms of the battleship Indiana, was murdered Wednesday on board the ship as it lay at its moorings at the Brooklyn navy yard. The murderer, Philip E. Carter, walked up to him and without a word of warning plunged a bayonet blade up to its hilt in his back. Kenny was a popular man, although a strict disciplinarian. The murder was preceded by a quarrel.

Faure's Visit to the Czar.

PARIS, July 1.—President Faure Wednesday informed the cabinet that he had received a letter from the Czar expressing the pleasure it would afford his majesty to receive him at the Peterhof palace. M. Faure added that he had decided to start for Russia at the middle of August.

Reduction in Wages.

STUEBENVILLE, July 1.—At the Mingo Junction Iron & Steel works, where a notice of a 15 per cent. reduction has been placed, to take effect Thursday, the furnace men have met and concluded to work at the reduction. At the meeting of the sheet bar and continuous mill men Wednesday evening they decided to go on a strike Thursday.

Miners Back to Work.

NEGAUNEE, Mich., July 1.—Orders were received Wednesday to resume work at the Buffalo mines Thursday morning with 350 men.

THE ORATORS

On the Fourth of July Asked to Prominently Treat the Cuban Question.

And Bring Out a Sentiment in Favor of Immediately Granting to Cubans Belonging Rights—Ex-Queen Liliuokalani in the Senate Gallery.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Col. A. A. Aguirre, a Cuban patriot, well-known in Washington, who has lost five brothers, officers in the Cuban army, asks the press of the country to urge in their columns that in the Fourth of July exercises the orator of the day shall prominently treat of the Cuban question and bring out the American sentiment in favor of granting belligerent rights to that struggling people as the first step toward ultimate recognition of the independence of Cuba. He desires to call attention to the organization of the National Relief association for Cuba in aid of the American Red Cross in Washington, under the auspices of some of the most prominent women of America. Its object is to raise funds to send the "American Red Cross" to Cuba.

Contributions for this cause will be received by Mrs. Senator J. C. Burrows, president of the association, 1404 Massachusetts avenue, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Ex-Queen Liliuokalani, of the Hawaiian islands, spent some time in the private gallery of the senate Tuesday, accompanied by three members of her suite. She first appeared in the senate marble room and sent her card to Senator Perkins, of California, who, after exchanging a few words with her and introducing her to many of his colleagues, escorted her to the gallery, where she took a front seat and appeared to be an interested listener to the debate on lead ore.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The work of consolidating small outlying post offices with a large adjacent one, making a single postal district with modern postal facilities, will be pushed vigorously by this administration in all sections of the country. The opposition to the scheme comes, it is said, from residents who have wrong ideas of the objects of the department, or from post office employees whose positions are thereby affected. The results of the consolidation policy so far carried out have been most gratifying to the Washington authorities and First Assistant Postmaster General Heath has determined that consolidation shall be effected wherever possible and feasible. Consolidation abolishes the individual small post offices, with their usually crude service, and substitutes substations for them; reduces the postmasters to sub-agents with accompanying saving of salaries and complicated auditing work, and instead of the many post offices, substitutes the large office with branches, all having free delivery and other advantages accruing to a post office from such privileges. The postal officials are confident that the extension of the movement will result in a big saving in expenditures, while furnishing immensely superior facilities. Several consolidations have been ordered and others are contemplated.

At Los Angeles, Cal., four or five offices nearby have been consolidated with good effect, and similar action has been taken at Denver recently.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The senate committee on finance has fixed the duty on coal at 67 cents per long ton. This rate applies only to coal shipped from countries which do not impose a higher rate on American coal. It therefore affects only Canada, the Canadian rate on American coal being the same. There has been a strong contention to hold the rate down to that originally fixed by the committee and even to lower it, but this effort was vigorously contested by the senators from the coal producing states, and the latter class have won.

STATE PRINTER PARKS

Will Abolish the Use of Type Setting Machines in the Kansas State Printing Office.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 30.—J. S. Parks, state printer elect, announces that the use of type setting machines will be abolished in the state printing office with the beginning of his administration on Thursday next. During the last session of the legislature the printers made a strong fight to secure the passage of a bill prohibiting the use of machines in the state office. In this they were unsuccessful, but they did succeed in having attached to the appropriation bill a rider which provides that the state printer shall receive but ten cents per 1,000 ems for machine work. It is claimed that at this rate the machines can not be operated except at a loss and as a result they will be thrown out and the state will pay from 30 to 45 cents per thousand for hand composition.

Western Writers Association.

EAGLE LAKE, Ind., June 30.—The Western Writers' association held its formal meeting at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. Gov. James A. Mount was elected a member of the association. A very fine programme was rendered, consisting of papers and music. No afternoon session was held, the members taking that time for their outing. President W. P. Fishback discoursed ably upon "Style" at the evening session. There were many new arrivals Tuesday.

Librarian Spofford to Retire.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—John Russell Young, of Philadelphia, was Tuesday tendered by the president the position of librarian of congress, and it was understood Tuesday night that he has accepted and the nomination will be sent to the senate Wednesday. Ainsworth R. Spofford, for more than memory of man runs to the contrary, has been in charge of this greatest library on earth, unless the British museum be excepted. He has now, because of advancing years, declined to longer continue in service. Mr. Spofford will be made assistant librarian.

SPAIN'S TROOPS.

Fifteen Hundred in the Hospitals at Manzanillo—Two-Thirds of the Soldiers in Santiago de Cuba Incapacitated.

HAVANA, July 1.—(Via Key West)—There are 1,500 sick soldiers in the hospital at Manzanillo, and sickness prevails at a high ratio through the entire province of Santiago de Cuba, where at least two-fifths of the troops are incapacitated by fever and other disorders. Beds and other nursing facilities are being forwarded from Havana. The Beattie Bros., a prominent firm of English planters in the Manzanillo district, have offered the government one of their warehouses as a military hospital.

At San Cristobal, in the province of Pinar del Rio, 6,000 "reconcentrados" are suffering acutely from the existing state of war and from disease. It is reported that the well-known insurgent leader, Baldomero Acosta, has succumbed to fever.

The Lederer column brought 14 women as prisoners to San Cristobal, among whom were Rosa Gomez and Juana Avelina, who had been wounded with bullets. Both were sent to the hospital at Sagua la Grande.

There has been considerable skirmishing during the last two days. On the night of the 20th the insurgents attacked the village of Vega Alta, but the Spanish sent reinforcements and drove them off. They also made an attack upon the fort at Remedios and burned the farm house on the Elbro plantation near the town.

Leader Alfredo Rego attacked and entered the village of Camanayagua, near Cienfuegos, plundered several stores and inflicted severe losses on the garrison. He also destroyed the telegraph line near Cruco.

It is reported that Leaders Lacret and Morlot have passed the trocha near Jucaro from east to west. The insurgents have burned several houses in the outskirts of the village of Santa Maria Rosario, in the province of Havana, while news comes from Batavia that there is considerable concentration of insurgent forces there.

HAVANA, July 1.—A special dispatch to La Lucha from Santiago de Cuba says that Gen. Weyler's chief hospital staff has ordered the immediate conservation of additional barracks, with beds for the sick. It is added that the local merchants will voluntarily pay the expenses incurred in the erection of these buildings.

The hospital facilities of Guantanamo are also to be increased, and new hospitals are to be established at Cobre, Longo, Palma and Tiguabo, all in Santiago de Cuba province.

A MAN ELECTROCUTED

And Another Horribly Shocked by a Guy Rope That Became Crossed With a Trolley Feed Wire.

CLEVELAND, O., July 1.—One man was electrocuted near here Wednesday morning, another was horribly shocked and several were severely burned. The accident occurred at Nine Mile creek, in the eastern suburb. The men were building a steel abutment with the aid of a huge derrick over the creek. A guy rope served to keep the derrick in position. The rope went over the feed wire of the big consolidated trolley system. Somehow or other the insulation wore off. Several men took hold of the guy rope to tighten it. That meant death to one, severe injuries to another and dangerous shock to several. A current of several thousand volts was pulsating through the wire. The first man to take hold of the rope was Jacob Miller. He was 65 years of age, paralyzed. When his hands touched the wire, he gave an ineffectual tug in an effort to free himself. Then with a loud shout he fell dead. Ed McGregor, another workman, took hold of the wire. With a superhuman effort he released his grasp but was hurled 20 feet. He was removed to the hospital. Three other workmen received dangerous shocks.

Triple Suicide.

ST. LOUIS, July 1.—What appears to have been a deliberate attempt at triple suicide was made near Wellsville, Mo., at midnight Tuesday night. Three men, lying side by side, with their heads upon the rail, were struck by Wabash train No. 6, due in St. Louis at an early hour in the morning. The first man's head was cut off, the second one's head was smashed and the third received serious internal injuries. Physicians say there is no hope for the recovery of the injured men. Their names are not known. An examination showed that the men were sober when they took their places on the track.

Democratic State Ticket.

COLUMBUS, O., July 1.—The democratic state convention Wednesday afternoon nominated the following state ticket: Governor, Horace L. Chapman; lieutenant governor, Melville D. Shaw; supreme judge, J. P. Spriggs; attorney general, W. H. Dore; state treasurer, James F. Wilson; board of public works, Peter H. Degnan; school commissioner, Byron H. Hurd.

Jubilee Dinner to the Poor.

LONDON, July 1.—The princess of Wales gave a jubilee dinner to the poor of Chelsea Wednesday afternoon at the royal hospital. Three thousand adults were dined during the early part of the afternoon and later 2,500 children were served with dinner. The princess of Wales visited the children, who gave her royal highness an ovation and presented her with an address of welcome.

Another Building Association Falls.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 1.—Following fast on the heels of the failure of the Commercial Building Trust Wednesday morning, which did a building and loan business, the Columbia Building Loan and Savings association Wednesday afternoon went to the wall with assets and liabilities of $100,000 each. As in the case of the Commercial, the cause of the failure is the recent decision of the court of appeals in which the interest rate is attacked and declared illegal. The officers are Gen. Basil W. Duke, president, and J. W. Jenkins, secretary.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—SENATE.—The senate Friday completed the wool schedule, the silk schedule and the tobacco schedule of the tariff bill, and with this accomplished, the tariff leaders had the satisfaction of knowing that all the schedules of the bill and the free list had been gone over once. There now only remains to go through the bill a second time, passing on the items passed over. These are very numerous and important, including hides, gloves, coal, tea and beer. After that the internal revenue features of the bill will be all that remain. Progress was rapid Friday, although the paragraph relating to carpets was contested. The consideration of the silk schedule led to a strong contest against the proposed duties on silk fabrics, Senators Teller and Mantle joining with the democrats in opposition. The paragraph was passed by the slender majority of two. The tobacco schedule went through with little friction after the committee had advanced the duty slightly on wrapper and leaf tobacco.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—SENATE.—The senate made good progress on the tariff bill Monday, disposing of the paragraphs relating to hides, and with this accomplished, the tariff bill was passed by the slender majority. As finally agreed on, the duty on hides is placed at 10 per cent ad valorem, in place of 14 1/2 cents a pound as originally reported by the finance committee. The paragraph relating to stained or painted glass windows was changed slightly in phrasing and the duties agreed to as reported. Paragraph 14, card clothing, was agreed to as in the house bill. In the paragraph on cross cut saws the committee made a change inserting steel hubs, and finished or unfinished, 10 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem.

HOUSE.—The session of the house Monday lasted only long enough to call the roll on Mr. Dingley's motion to adjourn. As soon as the journal had been approved the floor leader of the majority remarked that as he was not aware of any matters claiming the attention of the house Monday he would move an adjournment. Mr. Bailey (Tex.) challenged that statement with the observation that the bankruptcy bill and Cuban belligerency resolution were under consideration. The speaker applauded when the rising vote showed them in a majority of one, the vote resulting 85 to 86 against Mr. Dingley's motion. Thereupon Mr. Dingley demanded the yeas and nays and the roll was called. The vote was carried 87-88. Before the announcement of the vote on motion of Mr. Steele (rep. Ind.) July 10 was set aside as a day for paying tribute to the memory of the late W. S. Holman, of Indiana. The speaker announced that this order would be subject to the action of the committee on rules. At 12:45 p. m. the house adjourned until Thursday.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—SENATE.—After tedious consideration of the tariff bill throughout the day, the senate wound up with a half hour of lively and amusing colloquy between Senators Tillman, of South Carolina, and Chandler, of New York. Tillman, who had proposed an amendment to the tariff bill, providing a $100 head tax on all immigrants and a restriction against all those not coming to the United States to become citizens. Mr. Tillman made an earnest speech on the depressed condition of labor, but he was soon diverted from his theme by Mr. Chandler. The latter, adopting a style of mock gravity, directed the discussion toward Mr. Cleveland's administration. This in time brought from Mr. Tillman a vehement criticism of the late president, while Mr. Chandler drolly protested against these assaults on Mr. Cleveland by a member of his own party. When the fun had been fast and furious for some time, Mr. Tillman, who was restored after a brief debate and without the formality of a vote. This has the effect of leaving the Hawaiian treaty of reciprocity in full force and effect. During the day Mr. Turpie, of Indiana, spoke in support of the amendment for a two per cent duty on Hawaiian goods. His speech was notable for its picturesque metaphors and the virulence of his denunciation of the pending bill.

REAR-END COLLISION

Near Chicago Causes the Death of Three People and Serious Injury to Twenty-Three Others.

CHICAGO, July 1.—A rear-end collision on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, causing the loss of three lives and serious injuries to 25 persons, marked the departure of the Christian Endeavor delegates for the convention at San Francisco.

The dead are: Mrs. R. Shipman, of Fond du Lac, Wis.; John Gooding, of Fond du Lac, Wis., and an unknown tramp.

The accident occurred at 12:15 Wednesday morning at West Chicago, formerly known as Turner Junction, 30 miles out of Chicago, on the Galena division. Owing to the crush caused by the rush of Christian Endeavor business all regular schedules were abandoned and trains were sent out as fast as filled.

Nine sections left the Northwestern depot at intervals of 15 minutes, beginning at 10:30. Sections 1, 2 and 3 got through West Chicago safely, but sections 4 and 5 did not fare so well. Section 4 was composed of nine cars and carried 300 passengers. Section 5 was composed of ten cars, carrying 340 persons.

Section 4 left Chicago at 11:15 and was soon speeding over the prairie. While Section 4 was stopping at the water tank Section 5 came thundering up behind. The engine hit the rear car of Section 4 a terrific blow.

The two rear sleepers of section 4 were completely telescoped. The two dead passengers were occupants of the last sleeper. The tramp is supposed to have been riding on the trucks.

The road officials accuse Engineer Courtney, of section 5, of disregarding the danger signals.

A Gigantic Shut Down.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 1.—Every mill in the United States, whose wage scales are under the jurisdiction of the Amalgamated association of iron, steel and tin workers, will shut down Wednesday night. These mills altogether employ 25,000 men who are members of the Amalgamated association besides those who are not. The general shut down will take place on account of the failure of the Amalgamated association scale committee and the manufacturers to agree on a puddling rate at the conference held here Wednesday.

Some Interesting Facts Regarding the Output of Crescent Bicycles.

This article is intended to convey a conception of the enormous amount of raw material consumed during a season in supplying the demand for one of the most popular bicycles made. The Western Wheel Works, Chicago, makers of the Crescent wheel, have the largest, and without doubt the most complete, bicycle factory in the world, and can turn out, when running to fullest capacity, 725 finished Crescent bicycles in twelve hours, or a complete "up to date" bicycle per minute.

A Wonderful Rifle.

Hunting big game is not as hard work as it used to be in the days of the long, heavy, big bored rifles. With a light modern rifle, such as the Model '94 or '95 Winchester, more game can be killed and at much longer distances than with any one of the old long guns. The Model '95 Winchester is one of the highest powered rifles made. It will shoot a 30-caliber U. S. Army bullet through over 50 inches of dry pine boards, and drive a bullet at the rate of 2,000 feet a second through the air. Hunters all over the country say that this is the best hunting rifle ever made. Send to the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct., for a large illustrated catalogue free.

A FAIR REBEL'S TRICK.

A Fourth of July Story

It was the 3d of July and Betty Logan, known to many as the Belle of the Neutral Ground, that debatable strip of country along the Hudson where the cowboys and skinners roamed at will, stood on the porch of her pleasant little home. She was half surrounded by vines that failed to conceal her trim figure, the effect of which was heightened by the neat garb she wore. In one hand she held a letter she had just read for the fourth time, and as she lifted her eyes she beheld a man at the edge of the porch.

This man, a person whom the girl could trust, had just delivered the message, and while reading it Betty had become oblivious to his presence.

"It's bad news, Peter," said she, advancing a step and looking down into the man's face.

"Another victory for the king's men, Miss Betty?"

"That is not exactly it. It wasn't much of a battle, Nolan writes—"

The man interrupted the reading with a sudden exclamation.

"The letter is from Capt. Nolan, then?"

"Yes, and he is a prisoner in New York."

"That's bad. I know how he will chafe in confinement, for he wasn't born to rust out behind stone walls. But when they exchange him—"

"That's just the difficulty, Peter. When they exchange him! You may well say that. They will not exchange Nolan for an officer inferior in rank. They never do that, you know, Peter."

"I might have thought of that," answered the man, flushing a little. "I suppose a rescue is out of the question."

"Entirely so," said the girl. "Nolan writes that he is fairly treated, but he wants his liberty. You say the letter was delivered to you at the secret outpost?"

"Yes. I did not ask from whom it was, but obeyed orders and brought it direct to you."

"For which you have my thanks, Peter, and I will see that you are fully paid in the future."

In a few moments the patriotic girl was left alone, and after another reading of the letter, which told how the writer, Capt. Nolan James, a youthful officer in the continental army, had been captured by a detachment of British troops and conveyed to New York, then in possession of the enemy. The letter seemed to crumple in her resolute hand, and when she entered the house she flung it upon the table and picked up another letter lying there.

Unfolding this one she glanced over the lines which traced in a bold masculine hand ran as follows:

"Capt. Basil Lee, of the royal forces, begs leave to accept Miss Betty Logan's invitation to dine with her Tuesday and will be promptly on hand. Wishing his fair hostess health and happiness, he signs himself her ardent friend,
"CAPT. BASIL LEE,
"Fourth Dragons.
"New York, July 2, 1780."

A faint smile appeared at Betty's mouth as she perused the acceptance and placed it beside the one from her patriotic lover.

Capt. Lee had met her during one of the many incursions made by the royal dragons along the Hudson, and, though an enemy to American freedom, the girl had found him an agreeable visitor. Ignorant of Capt. James' misfortune, she invited the British officer to dine with her on the Fourth, as she lived almost alone in the old home-stead, her parents having died a short time prior to the beginning of hostili-

The imprisonment of Capt. James would naturally interfere with the pleasures of the coming day, but when the morning of the Fourth came there were no traces of regret on the fair rebel's face.

At ten o'clock Peter, who had been sent to a certain point from which the road leading to New York was visible for a long distance, came back with a broad grin on his face.

"I was thinking, Miss Betty, what a nice thing it would be if we could just contrive to exchange Capt. Nolan for Capt. Lee."

The girl seemed to start.

"What nonsense, Peter!" she exclaimed. "Whatever put that idea into your head?"

"It just walked in," smiled the man. "You see, they're equal in rank and—"

"Captains both," broke in the girl, looking across the porch from the open door. "These Utopian schemes don't always come out successful."

"Very well, I just give it for what it is worth," and Peter bowed himself out of the girl's presence, and Betty was alone again.

"What a good guesser Peter is," she smiled to herself. "Surely I have not betrayed myself, and no one, I hope, has let the cat out of the bag. I'll just give Peter credit for good guessing, that's all," and she went to her boudoir to dress for the officer's reception.

The old-fashioned clock in the wide hallway was striking 11 when a handsome young officer in the somewhat flashy uniform of the Royal Dragons, one of the crack regiments in the king's service, drew rein in front of the house and dismounted.

His riding boots were polished to perfection and he had brushed from the few flecks of mud they had encountered on the way up. He looked assuredly at the house, with its pretty flower beds on the lawn and the trellised porch, upon which stood a rocking-chair, Miss Betty's favorite seat. Throwing the lines over a post, to await Peter's attention, the young captain sauntered towards the house, and just as he mounted the steps a vision of loveliness appeared.

Miss Betty was simply but tastefully dressed and looked very pretty thus arrayed.

She smiled a cordial welcome to the officer as he came on and took his outstretched hand without a show of treachery.

"Though we differ about the war, Capt. Lee," said she, in her sprightly manner, "I cannot help asking you for the latest news from the front."

"There is but little to communicate. There has been no set engagement of late; the two armies seem to be planning for position, and it is doubtful if a battle will come off for some time."

"That is good. I do not like to hear of bloodshed. It is bad enough in this part of the country between the forayers, but when large armies meet in deadly conflict it is much worse. Still, and her eyes seemed to sparkle, "we cannot gain our independence without some bloodshed."

Capt. Lee smiled.

"I will never be able to convince you, I see," he said. "Like Ephraim, Miss Betty, you are joined to your idols."

"Yes, captain, to the idols of liberty and prosperity for America. You must admit that you find our soldiers men difficult to conquer. When people fight for their homes and native land they do not give up the struggle without a terrible contest."

"But in this case they are rebellious and the king will not stop short of their entire subjection."

The young girl's gaze wandered from the room, and for a little while seemed to rest on the bushes on the lawn.

Suddenly, however, she turned again to the officer and said:

"One of my friends has had the misfortune to become a prisoner of war."

"Indeed, Miss Betty!" exclaimed Capt. Lee, in the most innocent manner possible. "But that is one of the vicissitudes of war. Your friend must put up with it and consider that imprisonment is far better than being left on the battlefield."

"I do not doubt that, but confinement to Capt. James is irksome, to say the least."

The British officer seemed to start a little at mention of his rival's name.

"Capt. James is confined in New York," continued Betty. "He was captured in a skirmish and hurried thither. Exchange is hardly to be thought of, you know, since our people do not hold as prisoner an officer of equal rank."

The conversation now drifted to other subjects, and Capt. Lee was most pleasantly entertained by his fair hostess.

He knew that Betty Logan was intensely loyal to the cause of the colonies; but out of respect for her apparent helplessness her property had not been disturbed, though on several occasions several spies had been tracked to it.

Her only servants were Peter and a housemaid as loyal as her mistress, and with these Betty, the fair rebel, inhabited the little home near the Hudson in almost open defiance of the soldiers of the king.

Fond of music, Capt. Lee importuned his hostess for a song, and, rising, Betty swept to the instrument in one corner of the cozy parlor.

"What are your favorites, captain?" she asked, with a sly look over her shoulder.

"Washington's Retreat" for one," said the officer with a light laugh as he mentioned a song at that time popular in royalist circles in New York.

The cheeks of Betty Logan flushed and her fingers swept the ivory keys as if impelled by magic.

"You don't sing that, I suppose," continued the captain.

"I am here to entertain you and Washington's Retreat" shall be given according to request."

In another moment the melodious voice of the girl seemed to fill the house as she sang the piece which had received encore after encore in the theaters wherever the British held sway.

Capt. Lee listened like one entranced and his gaze followed her every movement like one enraptured.

"Perhaps you have heard this," said Betty, as the last note died away, and forthwith she started up with a rollicking cowboy air such as the wild marauders of the Neutral Ground were wont to sing when out on their forays.

It was full of the most rebellious sentiment, and some of its pointed allusions to King George drove the color from Capt. Lee's face.

But he was not in a position to grumble, for had not Betty sang a real royal air? He sat mutely and listened as the song crept on and on, the girl seeming to take delight in tingling the ears of her red-coated guest.

Several weeks intervened when one evening a young soldier rode up to the Logan home and sprang lightly to the ground.

He was met at the steps of the trellised porch by a young girl whose eyes sparkled above flushed cheeks.

"They tell me that I owe my exchange to you, Betty," he exclaimed. "Capt. Lee was very obstreperous at first, but he gave in at last and here I am."

"I don't know whether Capt. Lee will ever forgive me, but I didn't know of a better way to celebrate the Fourth of July," was the reply, and the merry laugh that followed told how happy was the Fair Rebel of the Neutral Ground.

The Love of Country.

There are not wanting those who sneer at love of country as narrow and provincial. But we think it will be found, as a rule, that the man who has no love for his own country and his own people, as distinguished from all the world, does not entertain very much regard for humanity in general. True patriotism is not the spurious kind that "Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy," but that which upholds, defends and makes much of home and country—promotes rather than diminishes world-wide sympathies. There are no more devoted patriots than the consecrated American missionaries who spend their lives in service for foreign lands. Our young people should be instructed to associate their celebration of Independence day with love of country, and to learn lessons of patriotism from those who on this day pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor to wrest the nation from a foreign yoke. The independence thus nobly won is a precious inheritance, they should be taught, because it has permitted the development on American soil of institutions which have blessed not us alone, but all the world besides.—N. Y. Examiner.

UNCLE SAM'S PATENT FOURTH-OF-JULY BICYCLE.

It has been impossible to decide with certainty who designed the American flag as first adopted by congress but the best recorded evidence gives part of the credit of designing it and all the credit of making it to Mrs. John Ross, an upholsterer, who resided on Arch street, Philadelphia. Her descendants assert that a committee of congress, accompanied by Gen. Washington, who was in Philadelphia in June, 1776, called upon Mrs. Ross and engaged her to make the flag from a rough drawing. This drawing was, at her suggestion, redrawn by Gen. Washington with a pencil, in her back parlor, and the flag thus designed was adopted by congress.

Although the resolution establishing the flag was not officially promulgated by the secretary of congress until September 3, 1777, it seems well authenticated that the regulation stars and stripes was carried at the battle of the Brandywine, September 11, 1777, and thenceforward during the battles of the revolution.—Youth's Companion.

Lee that the young girl's larder had not suffered much, if any, through the war.

At last the young officer pushed aside his plate and leaned back in his chair.

"I'm sorry I cannot offer you a dessert as fine as you enjoy in the old-time homes of New York," said the girl, apologetically. "Truth to tell, Capt. Lee, we must put up with just what we can get in the country in war times and—"

"Of course, begging pardon, Miss Betty," broke in the officer. "Your dessert, I am sure, will be delightful as your dinner has been, and I am disposed to praise it beforehand."

At this moment Miss Betty Logan waved her hand to Polly, who stood at the door leading into the kitchen.

"Our guest is ready for the dessert, Polly. You may bring it on."

A deeper crimson came to the maid's cheeks as she caught the subtle meaning of the words so artly spoken by Betty and in another moment she left the room, closing the door behind her.

"Behold the dessert, Capt. Lee!" exclaimed Betty, when the door opened a moment afterward, and the British officer staggered from the chair as his gaze fell upon three men dressed in continental uniform, each of whom covered him with a pistol.

"What's this, miss?" he cried. "What treachery is afoot under your roof?"

"It is simply the fortunes of war, Capt. Lee. You are a prisoner subject to exchange for another prisoner of equal rank. These gentlemen constitute the only dessert I have to offer, with profuse apologies."

At first Capt. Lee thought of resistance, but sober second thought came to the rescue and in a little while he was in the hands of the patriots.

"Your trick will fall short of its design, my little rebel!" he exclaimed. "Capt. James shall not be exchanged for Capt. Lee. I promise you that."

Betty made no reply and her late guest was hustled from the premises and escorted to the nearest American camp where he was turned over to the commander thereof.

Several weeks intervened when one evening a young soldier rode up to the Logan home and sprang lightly to the ground.

He was met at the steps of the trellised porch by a young girl whose eyes sparkled above flushed cheeks.

They tell me that I owe my exchange to you, Betty," he exclaimed. "Capt. Lee was very obstreperous at first, but he gave in at last and here I am."

"I don't know whether Capt. Lee will ever forgive me, but I didn't know of a better way to celebrate the Fourth of July," was the reply, and the merry laugh that followed told how happy was the Fair Rebel of the Neutral Ground.

CROSSING THE RIO GRANDE.

Driving Two Thousand Cattle from Mexico to the United States.

Something near 2,000 cattle crossed the Rio Grande at Eagle Pass lately. They were from a ranch in Coahuila and were to be delivered to one of the most prominent ranchmen in the southwest. At this time and place the Rio Grande is a pretty fair sized stream. It is nearly a quarter of a mile wide. At the fording place there is just enough water to swim a cow in the deepest place. It was not supposed, however, and it certainly was not the case, that the cattle would remain in the fording place. As it turned out, they occupied and performed countless maneuvers over about a mile.

The labor of the day began about the middle of the forenoon. The great herd of lowing quadrupeds were driven down at the foot of the old Mexican town across the river and on the long bar that faces the stream. There was an army of Mexicans on every side to keep them in place. A dozen bestrode lank horses; the remainder was afoot. There was an abundance of little brown boys, each with two frail garments and as many powerful lungs. The cattle were driven along the bar up under the bridge and to a point above the two towns to the fording place. And here the leaders were headed out into the stream. They took to the water with apparent willingness, and lashed their tails and proceeded with a great splashing sound as the 8,000-foot began to smite the water. When they were about half submerged the leaders turned a little to the right down stream. As if by previous arrangement the whole right flank turned in the same direction, and the multitude separated and became many little groups. The horsemen dashed in below them with Indian yells. A dozen men were suddenly afoot, and they were swimming rapidly out toward the heads of the leaders, with the intention of turning them. Some of them carried clubs in their hands as they swam, and when they came up with the dumb brutes they beat upon their faces. Some were turned in the right direction; many hundreds, less roughly urged, waded aimlessly down stream; others turned toward the bank and raced with the speed of the wind in the open country—dogs, horses and pedestrians in pursuit. The great herd of animals in the middle of the stream found deep water and swam. Little more than their heads was visible, and a thousand horns, suggestive of brush in flood time, caught the sunlight. They floated without apparent effort with the current, with none to control them, and when they sought the bank it was on the side of the river from that which they had started and at about the same point. The group that had been made to cross to the Texas side stood passively together at the edge of the water, with their heads stretched out before them.

The operation was repeated—with about the same success. The notable features of the performance were recalcitrant cattle dashing across sandbars far away, with the plains and far blue hills beyond; powerful and robust Mexicans—some of them entirely naked—riding back and forth with yells that would have been the fortune of a baseball coacher; swift and tireless swimmers gliding back and forth, some of them completely surrounded by misbehaving cattle, and hundreds of horns drifting about, seeming without aim, above the surface of the water. It seemed almost impossible to head the great herd in the right direction. Some could be made to go across, but that was obviously what the great majority did not want to do.

By about five o'clock in the afternoon something like 1,500 had been landed on the Texas side. They stood quietly enough when they were over and gave but little trouble to the herders. But those not yet across were naturally those least willing to cross, and all that a cow may do that is obstinate was done on this occasion. They appeared to have a great deal more endurance than the horses. They would reach the bank for the hundredth time and race with the spirit of a young yearling just released from a barn. The Mexicans began to rope and throw some of the most mischievous of the evil doers, that they might not lead the others astray, and after falling hard enough to break a limb they would get up, ready for another mad dash. The herders rivaled them in endurance.

One deep-chested fellow was thrown from his horse just as the latter was scrambling out of the water on a slippery bank—the animal stumbling. He rolled over and over, and then jumped up and started in pursuit of his frightened steed. The race was about equal, but another horseman came to the rescue and caught a bridle rein of the runaway. One slip of a boy followed a steer that had got away in the water by himself, and by swimming always in the right place and yelling in just the proper manner he succeeded in driving the big fellow across. A great cheer went up from the bridge, and it was faintly echoed by the people along the Mexican side.

Late in the day the cattle that had crossed and which had been standing below the bridge were driven to a point opposite the ford, that the still recalcitrant beasts in Mexico, on seeing them, might be encouraged to come over. As the great mass passed under the bridge it presented a strange sight to the crowd of people above. Looking down, it seemed like a great multi-colored serpent gliding along. The effect was indescribable. Opposite the ford they began moving around in a great circle, like the eddy in a mighty stream. They were becoming restless and a guard was placed about them to prevent their returning to their native land. It was not until close to six o'clock that the last stragglers were brought over, and it was necessary then to bring them over the bridge. There were perhaps half a hundred of these.—Eagle Pass (Tex.) Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

—John B. Duke, the millionaire cigarette maker, recently stated before the Lexow committee in New York that he had never smoked a cigarette in his life.

—The queen of Greece is so devoted to flowers that she delights to share with others her pleasures in them. By her orders large quantities are distributed in the hospitals of Athens twice a week.

—Lady Aberdeen is again protesting against the use of egret plumes in hats and bonnets. She has written to the editor of a well-known paper which advocates kindness to animals condemning the practice as being one of actual cruelty.

—The reigning grand duke of Luxembourg, admittedly one of the richest sovereigns in Europe, is indebted for the major part of his fortune to the percentage paid to him by the farmers of the public gambling tables of Wiesbaden, the capital of his former duchy of Nassau.

—Mme. Melby is still suffering from the after effects of influenza. She has, therefore, wisely resolved to go to the south of France and not to sing again in public until she is due at Covent Garden. In the autumn she has already arranged to tour in the English provinces under Messrs. Harrison.

—Dr. Eugene Dubois has discovered in Java the skull and thigh bone of an animal which he claims to be the missing link. From the two bones he has constructed, on paper, at any rate, the pithecanthropus, which is half man, half ape. Mr. W. K. Marshall gives an account of this discovery in the English Illustrated Magazine.

THE POTOMAC BASS.

Said by Good Judges to Be the Gam-Test of Fishes.

This fish is a wonder. Seldom exceeding five pounds in weight, nothing gamier is to be found in the waters of the earth. No mountain trout or pike or pickerel or salmon or ouananiche, pound for pound, is his equal. To an insatiable appetite and the predatory instinct of the eagle he joins a supernatural strength and activity and the temper of the devil. Firmly fastened at the end of a strong snell and 60 feet of line, he will leap two yards into the air and shake his head like a dog in the effort to disengage himself. There is no trick known to flumm tribs that he will not practice. He darts under the boat with a wicked rush and shows his knowledge of the frailty of the tackle. He will circle round and round a snag until the line is hopelessly involved. He will sink like a stone to the bottom and lie there like a log. Lifted to the surface by main strength, he is off with the speed of light straightaway as the crow flies until the reel buzzes like a bee and the thumb pressed upon it burns as if the hand held a live coal. Sometimes he will keep going until the strands part with a snap and he flashes on up the river with 200 feet of costly silk trailing behind him. When seemingly exhausted he is reeled in and lies a sluggish, defeated mass within a yard of the boat, his gills opening and shutting rapidly. The triumphant sportsman leans forward with the dip net, when with a whirl and a lunge and a momentary flash of his silvery sides he is away, and another half hour of intense struggle begins. It needs a quick hand, a cool brain, a wrist of steel and the patience of Griselda to capture the small-mouthed bass when he is at his best and bent on business.

The history of his introduction to the Potomac is peculiar. A quarter of a century ago he was unknown to these waters. At that time a farmer with sportsman's blood in him imported some of the young and put them in his fish pond, which was near the river. Two years after, when the fry had attained a respectable size, one of the freshets which this country is noted for overflowed the pond, broke down its walls and swept its contents into the river. So pugnacious is the bass that in the time since elapsed it has utterly exterminated its large-mouthed kinsmen, which before was plentiful, and all other fishes common to the stream, except minnows, which are too numerous, and a small perch, which escapes by keeping close to the banks, where there is not enough water for its heavy-draught enemy. Even the dread pike has found his match.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Changing New England's Climate.

For generations the people of New England have possessed their souls in patience and waited for that gradual improvement of climate to be brought about which was implied in the oft-repeated remark that the winters were getting shorter and less cold. Winter, however, continues its old habit of lingering so long in the lap of spring as to benumb the limbs of the sprightly youngster. The ingenuity of a Boston mind, however, is now attacking the problem of repressing the season of snow within its proper bounds of three months, and restraining it from spreading itself promiscuously over about six months. The plan is to fence off the chill arctic current by building a gigantic dam across the Straits of Belle Isle. It is suggested that a railroad could be run along this dam to St. John's, and that the trip to Europe could be thus shortened to 2,000 miles by water. It is a question just how New England will receive this proposition of Mr. Hammond, of Boston. New England is conservative, and might perhaps view with suspicion a more rapid amelioration of climate than it is accustomed to. Ephraim is joined to his idols, even though they are snow men in ice palaces.—N. Y. Tribune.

Best He Could Do.

The prisoner's dock is not a situation favorable to repartee. But on one occasion the accused undoubtedly scored.

"Why did you manufacture this bad money?" the magistrate said, sternly.

"Cos I couldn't turn out no better," replied the counterfeiter.—Tit-Bits.

"WHAT ARE YOUR FAVORITES, CAPTAIN?"

—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The First American Flag.

It has been impossible to decide with certainty who designed the American flag as first adopted by congress but the best recorded evidence gives part of the credit of designing it and all the credit of making it to Mrs. John Ross, an upholsterer, who resided on Arch street, Philadelphia. Her descendants assert that a committee of congress, accompanied by Gen. Washington, who was in Philadelphia in June, 1776, called upon Mrs. Ross and engaged her to make the flag from a rough drawing. This drawing was, at her suggestion, redrawn by Gen. Washington with a pencil, in her back parlor, and the flag thus designed was adopted by congress.

Although the resolution establishing the flag was not officially promulgated by the secretary of congress until September 3, 1777, it seems well authenticated that the regulation stars and stripes was carried at the battle of the Brandywine, September 11, 1777, and thenceforward during the battles of the revolution.—Youth's Companion.

That widely-traveled and judiciously-minded British novelist, Anthony Trollope, wrote to the London Times many years ago:

"Of all the sights on this earth of ours which tourists travel to see—at least of all those which I have seen—I am inclined to give the palm to the Falls of Niagara. In the catalogue of such sights, I intend to include all buildings, pictures, statues and wonders of art made by men's hands and also all beauties of nature prepared by the Creator for the delight of his creatures. This is a long word; but, as far as my taste and judgment go, it is justified. I know no other one thing so beautiful so glorious and so powerful."

A Railroad Official's Experience.

M. R. EDWARDS EDMONDS, long connected with railroad construction in Nebraska, writes: "My heart troubled and pained me for 19 years. Shortness of breath was the constant and most common symptom. Intense, excruciating pain, generally followed any severe exertion. Faintness, hunger without any appetite; fluttering that made me clutch my breast, and palpitation that often staggered me as if I would fall, were frequent attacks. Again, everything would turn black if I arose from a stooping posture quickly. Sleepless nights with their prostrating unrest were numerous and I could get no rest day or night. I consulted leading physicians and tried advertised remedies. They gave me no relief. One of Dr. Miles' circulars described my case so exactly that I took Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and I am now a well man. I hope every one troubled with heart disease will try Dr. Miles' remedies. If they will write me personally, I will gladly give them full details of my experience." EDW. EDMONDS.

The Dog Came Back.

THE wonderful achievements of Bourbon cats, which have been chronicled in THE NEWS, have been eclipsed by a Scotch terrier named Joe Blackburn, which was the property of John Murphy, a watchman at Walsh's distillery. Being found guilty of killing fine bantam chickens on the distillery premises, Joe was sentenced to death. He was hung to a rafter until he was apparently dead. Then he was slammed countless times against the floor, and his carcass was carted away and left as a feast for the buzzards. Joe's executioner reckoned without his host, for bright and early on the morning Joe sneaked back into one of the warehouses looking but little the worse for his terrible experience. That day, however, the dog was abducted, and the distillery knows him no more.

SPARROW FIGHT.

Caused a Run on the Bank—Queer Human Nature.

"The recent expose of the swindling speculative concerns in Wall street has shown how remarkably unsuspecting and gullible the average man and woman with small savings is," said a prominent New England savings bank official recently.

"It is just as funny, when yours is not the bank involved, to see how suspicious and fearful these same people become when there is the slightest sign of something wrong in the case of such ordinary reputable financial institutions as savings banks. People never stop to think about the most impossible advertisements of 'what syndicate,' etc., until after it is all over. They usually do all their thinking about solid savings banks before and not after something has happened.

"One day last week a most amusing thing occurred in connection with one of our smaller savings banks. It was during the noon luncheon hour. Two sparrows had been having a fierce battle in the street in front of the bank in question. The traffic on this particular street is quite heavy, particularly while clerks, merchants and others are on their way to and from the midday meal. The sparrows made a considerable noise and their movements finally landed them on the roof of the bank building. First one pedestrian stopped to watch the fight, and so on until a fair-sized crowd stood on the opposite side of the street and looked up intently toward the low bank building.

"That was enough. Late arrivals guessed at once something was the matter, and soon there was a rush from the outskirts of the crowd. A few were on their way to get their bank books and others to warn their friends. In the afternoon 38 depositors had appeared inside of half an hour, many of them humble, foreign-born workmen, and it took the best efforts of the entire bank force to quiet them down and induce them not to withdraw their deposits. As a matter of fact, four were paid off in gold to prove that they could have their money if necessary. Then they didn't want it."—N. Y. Mail and Express.

NIGHTMARE OF ROYAL COURTS.

Mourning for Rulers and Princes Keeps Royalties in Perpetual Black.

Court mourning may be described as the nightmare of European court life, as well as that portion of the official world and of society which is more or less intimately connected with the court. No entertainments can ever be organized, no festivity planned, without the everlasting dread of some royal death taking place to render necessary a postponement or an abandonment of the entire affair. Annoying for the men, it is still more so for the women, since they never know until the last minute whether they can wear colors or whether they are condemned to garments of sable blue. For even when the relationship of the dead prince or princess of the blood is so remote as to render unnecessary the postponement of social and official functions and entertainments, court mourning is, nevertheless, necessary for a period ranging all the way from ten days to three months, during which time every woman with pretensions to social standing is expected to array herself in black and to relegate her diamonds, her rubies, her sapphires and her emeralds and her turquoises to her casket, and to wear nothing in the shape of jewelry but pearls, which are the symbol of tears, while the men are expected to add a mourning band to their hats, to restrict themselves to black ties for day wear, and, if entitled to wear a uniform, to adorn the sleeves thereof with an armband of crape.

Royal persons and court officials are great sticklers about such matters as these, and, while any lady who ventures during a period of court mourning to attend a drawing-room or court function in colored attire exposes herself to an ungracious reception on the part of the royal personages present, there have even been numerous occasions where women have actually been prevented by the officials of the lord chamberlain's department from entering the presence of royalty at all, in consequence of their being dressed otherwise than in the prescribed black toilets."—N. Y. Tribune.

PETROLEUM LAKES.

Lakes of petroleum exist at Balakani, in the district of Baku, on the Caspian sea. A traveler on his first visit to these regions is astonished to see these dark-looking, almost immitable lakes, and still more surprised when he learns that these lakes are filled, not with water, but with petroleum. The whole soil around Baku is impregnated with petroleum, which now and again bursts forth in great fountains. One tapped in September, 1896, began to spout oil with extraordinary force, deluging the whole district. Nothing could be done to stop the outflow, which on the eighth day had reached a daily rate of 11,000 tons, or more than the entire product of the world at that time. Another gigantic fountain burst out in March, 1887, rising to a height of 350 feet, and, after forming an extensive petroleum lake, forced itself into the sea. The "Pitch lake of Trinidad" is the largest deposit of solid or semi-solid bitumen known. It has an area of 11,467 acres. The surface is not level, but is composed of spherical, polygonal and mushroom-like masses. The softer parts of the lake constantly evolve gas. It was from Trinidad asphalt that Mr. Gesney first prepared kerosene by distillation.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A man would rather look at a photograph of himself than at the finest painting on earth.—Athenian Globe.

MATILDA ANN AND ME.

When the nights are getting longer,
And the frosts begin to fall,
While the early pippins ripen
By the mossy garden wall,
Then I take my easy rocker,
In the kitchen after tea,
And we're happy as two lovers,
Just Matilda Ann and me.

While she washes out the dishes,
In her delf and dainty way,
'Tis a pleasure just to watch her,
And I haven't much to say,
As she sets them in the cupboard,
And we both of us agree
Not to light the parlor burner,
For Matilda Ann and me.

So we put our feet together
Closer to the glowing hearth,
And declare there never existed
Such a home as ours on earth.
Then sometimes she lets me kiss her;
Shades are down and none can see.
Else I'm sure they'd stop to envy
My Matilda Ann and me.

CAPTAIN GLOSE

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING.

(Copyright, 1894, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

XVI.—CONTINUED.

Then, when May came round and Lambert asked for three days leave. Minor hummed and hawed and looked at his staff officer and finally requested that it be submitted to writing; and "it" came back with a curt indorsement to the effect that Lieut. Lambert would be expected hereafter to show more interest in matters connected with his regimental duties; the application was disapproved.

All this time he had written every few weeks to Glose, and got a very nice letter in reply, written by a young fellow who announced himself as the captain's brother, Wallace. The captain was getting better—very much better—but the eye doctor's bill was a big one, and he thought the government ought to pay it. He had bought some land up there six years before, and what with schools and roads and bridges, the taxes were awful. What he wouldn't mind doing would be to come back to the regiment as quartermaster; but in those days there was no four-year limit to staff positions, and the incumbents, both adjutant and quartermaster, proposed to hang on as long as possible, and Lambert replied that he feared there would be no chance.

And then one day there came a telegram to the commanding officer of Company "G" at the barracks with the brief announcement that a soldier serving in the Twenty-sixth infantry under the name of Roberts had been identified by Corporal Floyd Walton, Fourth cavalry, as Private Riggs, a deserter from the—tenth. Please send charges and descriptive list. Two weeks later Lieut. Lambert was summoned to Austin as a witness before the general court-martial appointed for his trial. The Morgan line steamer would not sail until Saturday night. There was time to run over and see if the Waltons had not something to send to their soldier boy in Texas, and Lambert sent his trunk to the Morgan wharf while the Mobile boat paddled him away through the Rigolets and out into Mississippi sound and landed him at the familiar pier at Pass Christian just at twilight of a lovely May evening. Ten minutes' walk along the shore brought him to an inclosure wherein the moonbeams were beginning to play among the leaves of the magnolia and to throw a huge black shadow, that of the grove of live oaks, over the veranda of an old, white-painted southern homestead bowered in vines and shrubbery at the end of the broad shell pathway leading from the gate. Somewhere among the foliage a mocking bird was caroling to the rising moon, and the music of soft, girlish voices and subdued laughter came drifting out on the evening air. Lambert's heart gave a quickened throb or two as he recognized Kate Walton's unmistakable tones. He had to traverse the length of the moonlit walk. She, with her unseen friend, was in shadow, so there was no possibility of trying the effect of surprise.

"Well, whayuh'n the wide wuhld'd you come from?" was her nonchalant greeting. "Ah supposed you were day'd buried." (There is no such thing as spelling that word as pronounced by the roughest, sauciest, and possibly sweetest little mouth in creation. He could not take his eyes from it, and she knew it.)—"Miss Awgden, this is Mr. Lambert. Ah think you've heard sister Esthuh speak of him.—Ah suppose you want to go right in to see huh. Ah'll call huh down."

So Lambert made his bow to Miss Ogden, who had her own womanly intuitions as to the extent of his eagerness to see sister Esther, and who presently declared she had to go home, and went without much delay over the leave-taking, in spite of Katesie's voluble remonstrance and well-feigned disappointment. Miss Walton, in fact, hung on to her all the way to the gate and made every proper and apparent effort to detain her there; but a wise head had Miss Bettie Ogden: she would not delay. She had heard sister Esther talk of Mr. Lambert time and again, and had read in Katesie's significant silence or simulated scorn a whole volume of information. She went tripping lightly, laughingly away, and Katesie watched her until she was out of sight, then came dawdling slowly back. She well knew it would be unlike Esther to come down inside of 20 minutes.

Lambert was seated in the big wicker chair, amusing himself with a kitten. He did not even look up when she finally returned.

"Hasn't Esthuh come down yet? Ah told huh you wuh hyuh, ten minutes ago."

"No. Possibly she didn't understand. I didn't hear her answer. Indeed, I could hardly hear you call."

"That's because you were listening to Bettie Awgden." (Pause for reply or denial: none offered.) "She doesn't like Yankees any better'n I did—do."

"Then it was on my account she left so suddenly. Where does she live? I'll run and call her back and tell her—what shall I tell her?—that I only wanted to say good-by to Mrs. Seroggs?" "You haven't said how-de-do yet." "I haven't? How utterly stupid of me! You see between Miss Ogden and the cat, you were so engrossed that I deferred that ceremony until you should have time to devote to me. Permit me." And carefully depositing pussy on the chair, he quickly bent low and seized Miss Katesie's hand, which he raised toward his lips: "Miss Walton, I am so glad to see you again. This fortnight has seemed a year."

Indignantly she snatched her hand away.

"Fawtnight! It's five weeks to-day since you were hyuh." Then, suddenly conscious: "Not that I say—uh."

He started up in feigned astonishment. "Five weeks? You amaze me! And how sweet of you to keep count!" (Something more than mere teasing and merriment now in the sparkle of his eyes and the twitching about the corners of his handsome, sensitive mouth.) Those five weeks have been five years.

But she had sprung to the doorway, wrathful at being so artfully trapped.

"Ah didn't keep count. It was Moh; 'n' Ah don't say 'uh how long you stay away, or how soon you go. Esthuh! ain't you ayvuh coming down? Mr. Lambert says he's got to go."

"You haven't told me how Mrs. Walton is, and Mr. Seroggs, Miss Katesie. And how's Cousin Bart?"

"Cousin Bart's up at Quitman; so's Walton; and Moh's 'bout the same. She'll nayvuh be any better so long's Floyd's wuhh he is—wuh-uh a Yankee jacket."

"That is queer, isn't it? The queerest thing about it is that he's just been made corporal in the very troop he charged into at Selma. A classmate of mine is second lieutenant in the same troop, and wrote me about it."

"Floyd ought to be the lieutenant." "Miss Walton, you continually surprise, and now you delight me! This is really promising! A southern girl says her brother ought to be a Yankee officer."

But she flew at him from the doorstep, her eyes flashing fire. He seized the kitten and held the struggling quadruped, paws foremost, between him and the impending vengeance.

"Oh! Ah do despise an' hate you maw an' maw ev'ry time you come. You're mean, spiteful, hateful! You know Ah nevuh meant any such thing. Ah'd see'n him if he was! Ah'd tuh'n mah back on him—as Ah do on you now an' Ah wish it was fo'evuh!"

And, suiting action to word, the tumbling, clustering ringlets which fell upon her pretty shoulders were flouted almost in his face as she whirled about and marched back to the doorway.

"Well," said Lambert, mournfully, "it's an ill-wind that blows nobody good. Your wish bids fair to be granted. I think I won't disturb Mrs. Seroggs to-night, and if you'll tell me where to find Miss Ogden I'll bid her come back to you, so that you can resume the fun I interrupted. Kindly say to Mrs. Seroggs that if she has anything to send to Floyd and can get it ready before ten to-morrow morning I'll be glad to take it with my baggage. The hotel porter will come for it. Good-night, pussy. You don't seem to object to Yanks. Good-by, Miss Katesie. When your wishes are so promptly granted and you so easily get rid of a fellow you might shake hands with him, but pussy'll have to do."

With that he solemnly took the kitten by a furry paw and with ludicrous gravity gave it a formal shake, then turned deliberately away. He was down the steps and crumpling along the shell walk before she started from the stupor which had seized her. Then she sprang to the edge of the veranda, and he, treading lightly now and listening for the sounding of the summons for a parley, heard, as he expected, the half-tremulous, half-treacherly hail: "Aw, Miss' Lambert!"

"Yes?" "Whut you going?" "Oh, didn't I tell you? I'm ordered to Texas."

Then he listened, wickedly, maliciously, and vouchsafed no further word. For a moment not a sound came from the shaded veranda. Slowly, therefore, he turned, and, treading as though on china teacups, went on towards the gate. Did he hope she would call again? Did he know or realize the deep-rooted, stubborn pride of the southern girl? Slowly, more slowly still, he faltered to the gate. Nearing it, still eagerly listening, he shortened step, only pretending to walk. Still no sound, no summons to return. His hand was on the latch, and there it waited, reluctant to open, but waiting was in vain. He glanced back over his shoulder, and, vague and shadowy, he could just distinguish the outline of the slender form he had grown to love with such longing and tenderness and passion. It clung there motionless. At least, then, she had not turned indifferently away. But the word, the whisper, he prayed for and craved to hear, and would so eagerly have obeyed, came not to recall him. Fifteen—twenty seconds he waited, then, in sudden pride, or pique, or resolution, threw open the white barrier, slammed it after him, and strode briskly away, startling the mocking birds into sudden silence with the lively whistling of an old West Point quickstep.

But Esther, coming forth from the open doorway to greet and welcome their friend, saw the erect, soldierly figure marching off in the moonlight; saw her little sister standing as though rooted to the spot, heard the ostentatious spirit and swing and rhythm of "Buenas noches;" heard a faint, questioning, incredulous, fearful little voice piping: "Mr. Lambert! Mr. Lambert!" and the woman had learned in that instant what the lover would have given worlds to know.

XVII.

"Lieutenant, there's no use trying. We're only twenty, and there must be two hundred of 'em. They've got that stage load long before now, escort and all. The whole thing's over with. If there were any women 'twould be different; every man of us would go then to try to rescue them; but there were only men. I'm as sorry for Col. Sweet as you can be; but we can get his body when the Indians have gone. We can't afford to lose any more of our people."

The speaker was the captain of a party of Texas frontiersmen—rangers they were afterwards called, when their organization was more complete; but these were the days when the Lone Star state was uninhabited by railways and when to its very heart—as far as the capital—the savage Kiowas and Comanches often raided in full force, ravaging the scattered settlements far and wide. Lieut. Lambert, his duty finished with his testimony in the case of the deserter Riggs, had obtained permission to delay his return a few days, and taken stage to Lampasas, where Floyd Walton was stationed with his troop. Lambert would not willingly return without seeing him and delivering in person the little packages so hurriedly prepared at the new home. Then, too, there was no man in the army in whom the young officer now felt so deep an interest. Was he not Katesie's brother, and might not that brother have some influence over that obdurate heart?

It was not the porter of the hotel who went for these packages. It was Lambert himself, hoping, of course, to see the young lady whom he had so successfully tormented the evening previous; but his scheme had been cheek-mated in most absurdly unromantic fashion. The New Orleans evening paper among its military items contained a brief paragraph to the effect that Lieut. Lambert was ordered over to Austin as a witness before a court-martial there in session, but would return to the barracks in a week or ten days, and this paper he had been careless enough to leave on the veranda. Katesie had gone miserably to her room, Esther had lit upon the paragraph, and in ten minutes Lambert's melodramatic scheme was exploded.

Never would he forget the saucy merriment in her pretty face when he appeared upon the scene that morning, hoping and expecting to find her penitent, piteous, and mutely begging to be forgiven before he went away. He had come prepared to be grave, sorrowful, dignified, and then to be disarmed by her distress, to lead her away under the magnolias to the shaded recesses of the old southern garden, there to assure her that she was pardoned, and then to tell her how she was loved. A charming chateau in Espagne was that which the boy had builded; a sweet, sad, blissful, ecstatic parting was it all to be as a result of his skillful use of his "sudden orders to Texas;" but, like many another well-laid plan, it went ludicrously agley. She was there on the veranda, romping with her kitten, when he came and never made the slightest reference to his departure. He alluded gloomily to the fact that the boat would be along in less than an hour, and she cheerfully responded: "Yes; Ah thought Ah hudd its whistle just a moment ago," and raced puppy to the far end of the gallery. He tried other announcements with no better success, and was bewildered and defeated and stung by her apparent heartlessness and indifference when at last he had to go, and went away miserably jealous and wretchedly in love, fairly beaten at his own game.

So gloomy and unlike himself was Lambert that the two or three classmates who happened to be at Austin were much surprised, and so absorbed was he in his own woes and pangs that not until he reached Lampasas did he learn that the soldierly-looking man who rode all the way from the capital with him was no less a person than the Brevet Lieut. Col. Sweet of whom he had heard so much at Tugaloo, and who, promoted to the rank of major, was now on his way to report for duty at a frontier post. The stage with the colonel rumbled away on its journey for supper. Lambert went on out to camp, only to find that Corporal Walton with four men had gone as escort to that very stage, as there were rumors that the Comanches and Lipans were on the warpath again. It might be four days before they returned. It would be two before a stage went back to Austin, and it was now nine o'clock at night.

The very next morning brought direful news. A big band of hostiles had swooped down on the stage station at the crossing of the Caliente, 50 miles to the northwest, massacred everybody, and run off the stock. The cavalry troop in camp at Lampasas was miles away by the time the tidings reached Lambert at the tavern in town. Then came worse news. A settler rode spurting in from the Concho trail to say that he had seen the Indians when they attacked the stage with overpowering numbers, and had just managed to escape with his own life. He believed that not one soul was left to tell the tale. There were many gallant spirits among the Texans of the frontier—men who were accustomed to fight at the drop of the hat, and who, in defense of home and friends, were indomitable. Yet even these well knew the hopelessness of the situation as described. They were far too few in number to undertake the pursuit and attack of such a band as this. Moreover, their own wives and children would be left in danger were they to take the field. It was even impossible to persuade two or three of their number to ride post-haste on the trail of the cavalry, who, at the first alarm and on receipt of tidings that the Indians had ridden away eastward towards the Brazos, had taken the road for Waco at dawn in hopes of heading them off or driving them should they attack the defenseless settlements. There were, therefore, absolutely no troops to go to the rescue of the stage party, if, as seemed beyond hope, any of them were still alive, and Lambert, burning with eagerness to do something and tormented with anxiety as to the fate of "Brother Floyd," found himself helpless.

A sergeant and some semi-invalided men had been left in charge of camp, and from these he gathered a little information, but not of an enlivening nature. The nearest posts to the westward from which help might come were McAvett and Concho, each over a hundred miles away; but Concho, being on the left bank of the Colorado, and doubtless warned by this time of the Indian raid, could be sending cavalry down the valley in pursuit. It was expectation of this, probably, that started the raiders eastward towards the Brazos, where there were no troops, and where, sweeping northward again in wide circle, they might confidently expect to get safely back to their wild fastnesses, leading the cavalry a stern chase all the way. Shrewdest tacticians of modern warfare as they are, they had indeed already divided, one party riding eastward as reported after swooping down on the Caliente station, and driving some of the stock ahead of them, for the sole purpose of drawing the Lampasas troop off in that direction, leaving the settlers along the Colorado to the mercies of the other and larger portion of the savage force. There was no use now in sending couriers after the troop. It had five hours' start. It would be evening before the fleetest horse could overtake the command. Lambert urged the sergeant to give him a horse and arms, mount three or four men, and let them go with him, if only to reconnoiter. Then some of the Texans who had no families to defend might volunteer.

IT'S BAD SOMETIMES.

Laughter Is a Disease That May Kill You.

Laughter is a disease. This has been proved by numerous cases which have come under the notice of eminent neurologists, who have declared even moderate laughter a symptom of nervous hysteria. People have died of laughing.

From Austria comes a curious account of a man suffering from a nervous disease that manifested itself in paroxysms of laughter. The patient, whose case was described before the Psychiatric and Neurological society of Vienna, was 30 years of age and had been subject for three years to fits of laughter, which occurred at first every two or three months, gradually increasing in frequency to a dozen or more a day.

The attacks occurred especially between nine in the evening and 6:30 o'clock in the morning, and in greater frequency between five and 6:30 o'clock. Some occurred also during the day, however the patient happened to be occupied.

In the intervals between the attacks and immediately before and after the man was perfectly well. The attacks set in with a tickling sensation arising from the toes of the left foot, and the patient would fall to the ground unless he could reach some place to lie down. When the feeling reached the level of the left nipple the patient lost consciousness for a few seconds.

Often the patient lay upon his face. The mouth and eyes were closed spasmodically, the eyeballs turned upward; the pupils were dilated and unresponsive to light.

At the height of the attack the patient at first smiled and then laughed aloud without other sign of merriment. The entire attack occupied about two minutes. On two occasions there was protracted loss of consciousness.—N. Y. Recorder.

Eyes See by Their Own Light.

Helmholz has shown that the fundi of the eyes are themselves luminous. In making an experiment he was able to see in total darkness the movements of his arms by the light of his own eyes! Oculists and physiologists declare that this is one of the most remarkable experiments recorded in the history of the sciences. Probably there are but few men living who could satisfactorily repeat the experiment, for the reason that it is very likely that the luminosity of the human eye is associated with uncommon activity of the brain. It is the fluorescence of the brain, as it were.—St. Louis Republic.

Their Own Language.

A good story is told of the late Archbishop Benson's coachman. On a certain day, getting into a tight block among some cabmen, he indulged in a hearty swear—a rather frequent habit with him. His master heard him, and putting his head out of the window sternly remonstrated. "Beg your pardon, my lord," the old reprobate replied, "but I heard you tell them 'ere gents as was ordained last Sunday that if you don't speak to people in their own natural tongue, you will never get 'em to understand you."—London Globe.

—Anxious Mother—"I don't understand how it is, Bertie, that you are always at the foot of your class. Bertie—"I don't understand it myself; but I know it's dreadful easy."—Boston Transcript.

—Properly Situated.—"They may say what they like against him," said the convicted one's defender, "but his heart is in the right place." "Yes," assented the other, "and so is the rest of him, for a few years."—Indianapolis Journal.

—The Cause of the Rush.—"Why is that man dragging that poor little boy along that way. Gracious goodness! He'll jerk the poor, weeping little fellow's arm out of its socket! What do you suppose is the trouble?" "There's a circus parade up on the next street, and the man is probably afraid that the little boy will miss it, if they don't hurry."—Cleveland Leader.

—A poor woman who kept a small shop in a northern village, and who was troubled with a husband who could scarcely be considered a credit to the family, one day found herself a widow through the sudden demise of her spouse. Said a lady: "I am sure, Mrs. G—, you must miss your husband." "Well, mum, it do seem queer to go into the shop and find something in the till!"—Tit-Bits.

MODERATION IN ATHLETICS.

Americans Are Believers in Plenty of Exercise.

It can no longer be said that Americans are too sedentary a people. The advantages and pleasures of recreation in the open air are now so well appreciated in this country that a campaign of education in that direction has become superfluous. Both sexes are practical believers in the benefits of a frequent outing. Dwellers in cities are encouraged to seek the open air by the establishment of large and attractive parks and by low fares for long rides to pleasant suburban places. Of course the wheel has been a leading cause of the genial revolution in favor of exercise in the breathing places of a city. So rapid has been the change that the hygienist is now more disposed to talk of moderation in athletics than to dissuade people to get out of the house and do something for their health. The eager, nervous American temperament needs to be calmed a little, at least in the department of the more active athletics. It is far better to avoid the risks of overtraining, than be compelled to seek their remedy, a trite argument, but not uncalled for.

There is the wheelman, for instance, who is deeply interested in century runs. It is, perhaps, impossible to convince him that he is the victim of a ridiculous delusion that the arbitrary figure of 100 has any particular merit. But it must be admitted that this passion for setting fixed boundaries in the future is not confined to cycling. Many a money breeder is more anxious for the second million than the first. An English notability who resolved to win the derby, marry the richest heiress in England and become the British premier realized his hopes, but he cut rather a sorry figure as premier and the world has almost forgotten him. A run on the wheel, stopping short of serious fatigue, is the sensible thing to undertake, and the same rule of leaning to the side of reasonable conservatism holds good of all forms of active recreation. Prof. Sargent, of Harvard, says that the idea of carrying athletics to excess is most erroneous, and that "a great many young people do themselves injury by their excessive zeal in the practice of competitive exercise." Another authority contends that people who work hard either with body or brains need amusement for their leisure rather than active exertion.

Not long ago the papers mentioned the case of a number of boys of a larger growth who engaged in a tournament to see which could stick out his tongue the furthest. The one who triumphed injured himself to such an extent that he was in the hands of the surgeons for two weeks. It was an expensive century run, but perhaps the sense of having broken the record was an adequate reward and a vindication of the youth's American blood. Enthusiasts in athletics should remember that the average life attained by prize fighters is only 47 years, and they are men of exceptional physique and constitution. A careful and learned adviser on this subject says that instead of working under high pressure for a short time much more can be accomplished and with less risk to health by working under a low pressure for a longer time. If, Shakespeare asks, "sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue but moody and dull melancholy?" it will be noticed that the adjective qualifying the recreation means the opposite of violent or excessive.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Wise in His Generation.

A certain Paris photographer never says to a certain lady customer: "Now, look pleasant, madam, if you please." He knows a formula infinitely better than that. In the most natural manner in the world he remarks: "It is unnecessary to ask madam to look pleasant; she could not look otherwise." Then click goes the camera, and the result is never in doubt.—London Morning.

THE FARMING WORLD.

SECURING BARN DOORS.

A Device That Saves Much Annoyance and Lots of Temper.

I am using something on my farm which may be of value to my fellow farmers. I will send a sketch with explanations so that any farmer may use one if he wishes. It is a device for fastening barn doors open, or catching them if they slam open. It is of greater utility because it can be used in cases where the doors overlap each other in opening, as in the figure. It may be simplified to meet the necessity of holding only one door, or two doors, any reasonable distance apart. It is secure and serviceable. You will need for its construction three small posts and several pieces of boards, two small pieces of one-eighth inch rope, two old pails (empty paint cans are all right), a few good eightpenny nails, two old bolts and a few common wire staples (or you may use nails and bend them). For tools you will need a hammer, saw, brace and one-fourth inch bit, and a shovel. Now read these directions over in connection with the accompanying figure and you can try your hand at one as soon as you like and be certain of success. A, A and A, are three uprights or posts set at such an angle and position that as the doors open they will reach to points marked F with their outer edge. B, B and B are three boards nailed securely to the tops of A, A and A, so as to form a secure triangular base for the locks or latches to rest upon. The latches or locks C C should be of hard wood, oak or hickory, and one end should be chopped or saved as in the figure, being careful to have the edges marked H H very smooth and the notches marked F F deep enough to hold the door securely. E E are latches or small pieces nailed securely on raised blocks so as to secure the locks C C, and at the same time to allow them considerable side play. At I on each lock a hole should be bored extending through B. Though these holes drop a bolt; an old one is as good as any. These are the pivots on which C and C turn. Next fasten one end of your piece of rope to C and C as in the figure and run the other end through the auger holes J J and fasten to them the pails into which drop several stones or anything which will give them weight. Now if you have followed the directions carefully, when you open your doors they will swing so that their outer edges will engage the locks at H H, and as you still push them farther back the pressure on the locks will overcome the resistance of the weights attached to the ropes and the locks will swing back and let the edges of the doors catch in the notches F F and the weights K K will hold them securely in any ordinary gale. The dotted line shows position of the door fastened open.—Deamorr R. Drake, in Ohio Farmer.

HINTS FOR STOCKMEN.

Color has nothing to do with the value of cattle.

Good horses find ready sale in the east.

Don't send poor stock to market. It is a losing game.

Badly ventilated stables are pretty sure to injure the horse.

Corn is too heated a food to be fed alone to horses in hot weather.

Kindness to the young animal is a cheap way to increase its value.

Give the growing animals plenty of room. They should have plenty of space.

A well mated team means mated as regards strength and endurance, rather than size and color.

The Poland-China pig has made fortunes for many men, and will make fortunes for many more.

If the rail fences are somewhat out of repair, try running a strand of barbed wire along the top of them.

Use the same gentle method with the mule colt as is used with the horse colt. It will add 50 per cent. to the value of the mule.—Western Plowman.

Cholera and Indigestion.

As the warm weather comes on there will be cases of chicken-cholera reported. It is safe to say that cholera among fowls is a very rare disease. Persons diagnose cases as cholera when such is not true. When cholera appears it usually takes off the flock in a few days. Should the hens be affected with bowel disease and the difficulty continue for quite awhile, it may be safely concluded that indigestion from over-eating, and not cholera, is at fault, the remedy being to shut off all food and compel the hens to work and scratch.—Farm and Fireside.

Rapid Development of Pigs.

The fact that the country is short on swine and long on corn, renders it especially desirable this year that growers should feed and care for the pigs in a way that will develop them rapidly and perfectly. The tendency is to feed the growing pigs too much corn. Some corn is all right, but the ration should contain some more nitrogenous food to give a good development of bone and muscle; then when you come to fatten on corn you will have something to build on.—Rural World.

THE RAZOR-BACK HOG.

A Kansas Editor Tells What He Thinks of the Creature.

Among the many odes, apostrophes and biographies written of the razor-back hog the Cottonwood Falls (Kan.) Leader gets out a good one: "The razor-back is a breed of hogs raised in the south before the war and still to be found in some localities. He is built on the Swiss-cottage style of architecture. His ears lay back with a devil-may-care air. His tail has no curl, but hangs limp as a dish-rag. The highest point of his corrugated back is ten inches above the root of the tail. He ignores the slow, stately walk of the Berkshire and goes in a lively 2:10 trot. He always travels as if he were trying to catch a train which had just whistled for the station and he had a quarter of a mile to go.

"The thoroughbred razor-back prowls around the woods, living on acorns, nuts and roots, and, if necessary, can climb a tree like a monkey. Occasionally he crowds under a gate and assists in harvesting his owner's corn crop, and if he has any time to spare from his owner's crop he will turn in and assist his neighbor, often working at night rather than see the crop spoil for want of attention. He never knew the luxury of a sty. He wouldn't get fat if he could and is only fit to kill on the day of eternity.

"Crossing the razor-back with the blue-blood stock makes no improvement. The only successful way is to cross him with a locomotive going 30 miles an hour. He then becomes an imported thoroughbred and the railroad company pays for him at the rate of 50 cents a pound. The ham of a razor-back is almost as juicy as the ham of an iron fire-dog, but not quite as good eating as sassafras bark. A man who is an authority on razor-backs says a razor-back is the only bird of prey that is amphibious in its habits and can lift a feather off its hinges without ruffling a feather."

CATTLE ON THE FARM.

The Man Who Has Kept His Fum Well Stocked Is Happy Now.

A few years ago it was common to hear the remark that farm lands were too high in price to make cattle raising feasible or profitable. The demand this season for beef-bred bulls would seem to indicate that the average farmer has undergone a change of mind upon that point. The fact is, farm lands have been going down in price with too much grain and grass and too few cattle, says the Nebraska Farmer. At the same time cattle have been climbing up in the scale of prices, until all of us are beginning to see more clearly the reciprocal relations that should and must exist between the farm lands of this rich corn belt region, and that class of cattle especially adapted to the consumption of corn. There is not a farm in the state but that is actually worth more money per acre to-day for having supported a herd of cattle the past ten years. The fertility of its acres is retained instead of being shipped away in the form of hay and grain. It is, therefore, a pretty well settled principle among farmers that the man who stays by good cattle through thick and thin is all the better off for doing so. In all such matters, of course, the general public mind is bound to fluctuate. Cattle are in greater favor while they are scarce in numbers, then they become less popular with the masses as they multiply. But the cattle man who goes right along raising wood one year after another for ten years, has a better promise of success with his farm than to undertake to dodge from one thing to another with every wind that blows. Beef cattle have their innings just now, and happy is the man who has kept his lands well stocked with good blood. He is a sure winner in the long run.

HANDY HOG HOLDER.

It Is Easily Adjusted and Just as Easily Removed.

The simple, inexpensive article for holding hogs, illustrated herewith, recommends itself to anyone who has many hogs to ring. It will save time and labor enough in ringing 20 hogs to pay for itself the first time. The hogs should be confined in a close pen so that the one who handles the holder can walk up behind them and reach over and slip the larger stirrup-shaped end over the snout and into the month. The hog will back up and the operator standing in front can very easily hold any hog perfectly still. It is easily adjusted, easily taken out, and when in use gives a leverage upon the upper jaw which secures perfect control of the animal in ringing.—Farm and Home.

To Make Good Whitewash.

For a good whitewash for your bedroom ceiling put a piece of lime weighing about five pounds in a granite pan or bucket; pour on it a gallon of water, allow it to boil and slack until the steaming is over; take from this two quarts of the liquid lime, put it in a wooden or granite bucket, and add sufficient water to make it rather thin. Add a small amount of pure indigo, sufficient to give it the proper color; add a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of lampblack, stir well. This will give you a perfectly white ceiling; if you wish it colored add one of the colorings which you may purchase at any druggist's, stating that it is to be used with lime.—Ladies' Home Journal.

ON THE FARM.

An estimate of the loss of the soluble portions of manure that is exposed to rains and the direct rays of the sun, if it could be made, would show that one-half of its value is lost by leeching, fire-fanging, etc.

In a dry season there is no fertilizer which produces better results with potatoes than wood ashes, notwithstanding the fact that ashes seem to dry themselves. Equally good results will follow when they are sprinkled on the strawberry bed.

The mistake of keeping and using crossbred males aids materially in degenerating the hogs on many farms. The boar should be a thoroughbred, or there will be no uniformity in the offspring. There is little pleasure in raising mongrels.

It is claimed that the use of ensilage enables the dairyman to keep twice as many cows as when no ensilage is used. There is no crop so easily grown and at so small an outlay for labor as ensilage corn, and it not only provides a large addition to the bulky foods, but enables the dairyman to give succulent food in winter, thus keeping the animals in good condition.

Navy beans can be grown profitably, and they bring as good prices as any other crop. The heaviest yields are secured when they are carefully cultivated and grown on ground that has been well manured the previous year. The harvesting of the crop is the critical work with them, as they are liable to damage if exposed to rains after harvesting them, but there is machinery now in use which lessens the labor and makes them as sure as any other crop.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

According to the experiments of M. Seguy and M. Quenisset the X-rays cause dangerous palpitations of the heart. The experiments were made on medical students and upon themselves, and M. Seguy and M. Quenisset describe the palpitations as violent and unendurable unless the rays were intercepted by a metallic plate.

Alaska, our remarkable outlying territory, is almost as large in area as the entire United States east of the Mississippi. It is rich in mineral wealth, and has already yielded many times its cost in the precious and other metals. Every year its value to the United States is increasing, and yet it is entirely isolated from the rest of our territory—just as Cuba would be were we to acquire it.

"Alcohol," said M. Martindale, in a paper read recently before the Pharmaceutical society, "is not a germicide. When present to the extent of 20 per cent. by volume of absolute alcohol, it has an inhibitory effect on the germination of most of the micro-organisms occurring in aqueous solutions of vegetables and animal substances; but the germs propagate readily as it evaporates."

Naturalists consider it a wonderful fact that the Bermuda islands have only seven native species of land birds, while no less than 128 species pay visits to the islands. Many of these visitors are birds which pass the summer in the United States, and utilize the Bermuda islands as a convenient winter resort, thus imitating some of their human compatriots. Even some American bats follow the example of the birds by wintering in the Bermudas.

The American Queen for June is a recreation number and has several stunning pictures of noted New York women prominent in various sports.

Every Month has a fascinating array of pictures of pretty women, famous people, literary gossip and good photographs. There is also music to be found for the looking.

The Month has a tempting lot of gossip about people who write books, their latest works and peculiarities. Edith Thomas' poem is especially good and the large number of portraits adds to the value of the issue.

Mr. Richard Harding Davis' first novel, "Soldiers of Fortune," just published by Scribner's, was in its second edition over a week before it appeared, the advance orders speedily exhausting the first edition of 10,000 copies.

HER LIFELIKE STATUE.

Signified Her Departure from the World of Artists.

Before her marriage she had been a famous sculptress. She had made several portraits of well-known men, and everyone predicted for her a still more brilliant future, when she suddenly, at all predictions at naught by marrying a wealthy man who disapproved of her keeping up her professional work. She was very quiet under this restriction, but was supposed to rebel inwardly. Therefore when, at a dinner party one evening, she asked her old friend, Gen. Bashar, to come and see her on the following evening and inspect her last piece of work, which she thought the best and most lifelike she had ever executed, he supposed he was to use his influence to prevail upon the husband to permit her to resume her place among the working fraternity of artists.

"I am sure you will like it, general," she said, with a winning smile. "It fairly lives and breathes. I confess I am in love with it myself."

On the appointed evening the general, with some misgivings over the delicacy of the task intrusted to him, presented himself. Instead of inviting him to the studio, his hostess, to his surprise, offered to bring her last work to him.

"Oh, it's a statuette, is it?" he asked.

"Well, yes, you might call it so," she answered, as she went out of the room. In a few minutes she returned, bearing in her arms—a baby!—Chicago Times-Herald.

HEALTHY AT SEVENTY-TWO.

Mr. C. M. Higgins Passes the Three Score and Ten Mile-Post in Good Health.

For a Decade Previous, However, He was a Great Sufferer from Rheumatism. The Story of His Battle with It is of Interest.

From the Leader, Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. C. M. Higgins, of Collinwood, Ohio, one of the attractive western suburbs of Cleveland, is a retired and highly-respected citizen, and has passed the threescore and ten milepost in the journey of life. He is in his 72nd year. He with his wife, lives at No. 277 Clark Ave.

Until two years ago Mr. Higgins had been a sufferer from rheumatism for ten years. Nearly every part of his body was affected, but especially his right side below the hip. He tried medicine to ease the pain, but to no avail. In the fall of 1894 he purchased two boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Mr. Higgins said:

"The pain was greatest in the fall, winter and spring, owing to the dampness, and my right leg and hip were helpless most of the time, and to sit in an easy chair propped up with pillows, with my rheumatic limb resting on cushions on another chair. Year after year I tried various remedies but to no avail, and as time passed my rheumatism grew more and more distressing.

"My wife finally told me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She had read about them in the newspapers, and thought they would benefit me as they had others. So I sent over to Smith's drug store on Collamer St., and bought two boxes and they proved to be a most wonderful medicine.

"I had scarcely started to use them before I began to feel better. I found I could sleep well at night which I was unable to do before—and my appetite returned to me. I only used a few boxes and I was well. Not since the autumn of 1894 have I been troubled with rheumatism."

Mr. Higgins is one of the patriotic Americans who went to the front in the days of the rebellion, and is at present a member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Two Mighty Continents.

North and South America, beside Guatemala, the West Indies, Australia, and even Europe, are the fields of usefulness in which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters have demonstrated its value as an antidote to malaria, and as a remedy for dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, neuralgia, biliousness, nervousness, and loss of appetite and sleep. The inhabitants, the medical men of these countries, have spoken in no uncertain tones concerning the efficacy of the great household remedy.

SILENT SUFFERERS.

Women do not Like to Tell a Doctor the Details of Their Private Ills.

The reason why so many women suffer in silence from the multiple disorders connected with their sexual system is that they cannot bear to broach the subject to a man, even if he is a physician.

No one can blame a modest, sensitive woman for this reticence. It is unnecessary in these times, however, for a woman makes to all afflicted women a most generous offer. Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., bids every woman who suffers to write to her and confide every symptom that annoys her, and she will give her advice without charge, and that advice is based upon the greatest experience ever possessed by man or woman in this country, and extends over a period of twenty-three years, and thousands upon thousands of cases. Why suffer in silence any longer, my sister, when you can get help for the asking? Don't fear to tell her everything. The case of Mrs. Colony, whose letter to Mrs. Pinkham we publish, is an illustration of the good to be received from Mrs. Pinkham's advice; here is a woman who was sick for years and could get no relief—at last in despair she wrote to Mrs. Pinkham—received in return a prompt, sympathetic and interested reply. Note the result and go and do likewise.

"I was troubled with such an aching in my back and hips, and I felt so tired all the time, and had for four years. For the last year it was all I could do to drag around. I would have such a ringing in my head by spells that it seemed as though I would grow crazy. I ached from my shoulders to my feet and was very nervous. I was also troubled with a white discharge. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., received a prompt reply and followed her advice, and now I have no backache and begin to feel as one ought; in fact, I never felt better in ten years than I do now. I thank God that I went doctoring with Mrs. Pinkham when I did, for if I had not I know I would have been in my grave."

Excursion to Niagara Falls.

The annual excursion of the C. H. & D. Railway to Niagara Falls will occur this year on July 8th. The rate from Cincinnati, O., will be $7.00. Tickets will be good five days. Trains will leave Cincinnati about 12:00 Noon. The accommodations will be first-class in every particular. Elegant day coaches, Pullman and Wagner sleeping cars. The route is the most interesting of any. Going via Toledo, Detroit and the Michigan Central Railway through the best part of Southern Canada, direct to the Falls. This is the only line that passes close to the brink from which a full and complete view of both the American and Canadian Falls can be seen to advantage. Niagara is one of the greatest wonders on the globe—everybody knows of Niagara, and everybody wants to go there. The C. H. & D. R'y. was the first to inaugurate these cheap excursions, and always has the best accommodations provided for its patrons. Persons desiring full information about this excursion, should address the undersigned and a descriptive circular will be mailed you.
